

BRIDGING PROGRAM IN SPEECH LANGUAGE PATHOLOGY

Are you:

- Interested in becoming a speech language pathologist, but not a speech language pathology major?
- Changing careers and need to meet the requirements for graduate school?
- Interested in becoming a licensed SLPA?

This post-baccalaureate program increases access to graduate training programs in speech-language pathology by creating a “bridge” for students with undergraduate degrees in other fields or for students who lack one or more required courses for entry to a graduate program.

Advantages of the Bridge Program:

- Prepares you for CSD/SLP graduate programs through a comprehensive prerequisite program
- Clinical opportunities on campus before you start your master’s program
- Begin developing meaningful professional connections
- Can lead to licensure as an SLPA in the state of Indiana

Career Prospects

The Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) projects that careers in speech-language pathology will grow much faster than the average job growth rate—increasing by 25% from 2019 to 2029. Speech language pathologists work in various settings;

- Elementary, middle and high schools
- Home health agencies and rehabilitation centers
- Skilled nursing facilities
- Hospitals and outpatient clinics
- Offices of ear, nose and throat doctors

Speech Language Pathology is a rewarding career where you will be able to help your clients improve the quality of their lives through communication. Our curriculum is designed to provide you with the foundation to either start working as a speech language pathology assistant in Indiana or continue on to graduate school to become a speech language pathologist who can practice just about anywhere.

Completing my prerequisites at Saint Mary’s, I learned how friendly and supportive the professors are in making sure we understand the material and what it means to be an SLP in the field. Taking these prerequisites at SMC, I have an even better foundation and that will help me feel more prepared for graduate school next fall.

Curriculum

This program is designed to allow students who have earned a bachelor’s degree in another discipline to complete most* of the prerequisite courses in speech language pathology for graduate school in one year (fall, spring, summer). Saint Mary’s College has both the course work and clinical practicum that allows you get ahead in the field. Our curriculum combines academic theory, practical applications, and clinical experience all while you develop meaningful connections with your professors and other speech language pathologists.

These bridge courses, often called leveling courses, ensure that all students beginning a master’s program in speech language pathology have equal levels of preparation.
